Four of Party of Six California '49ers Celebrate Anniversary of Their Return.

Part of them made the journey across the plains to the "land of promise" in 1849 and the others in 1850-51. But they all returned together in the year 1853, starting upon their homeward trip on June 9 with provisions enough to last them only to Salt Lake. They passed no wagons nor other means of conveyance except their pack mules, each being provided with two of these, but they accomplished the hazardous undertaking in two months and five days, arriving in Cooper County, Missouri, on August 4, 1853. It was a journey of nearly 3,000 miles and a most dangerous one for so small a company to attempt, when the country along the route was unsettled-a barren wilderness, where the wild beast and the red man held full sway. But according to the narrations of one of the party "they were

STORY OF AN INDIAN "PLANT."

Government Annuity of About Twelve Thousand Dollars Stolen From Sacs and Buried by Foxes.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL Macon, Mo., Aug. 17.-The information reached here to-day through a trustworthy source that James Perrin and son, Thomas farmers of western Macon County, while digging for fish bait with a mattock, unearthed an old tin can containing $1,000 in gold. There were it is stated, fifty $20 pieces and the balance in $5 and $10 pieces. The find was made on what is known as "John London's west forty," near the Chariton River, eights miles south of the Burlington Railroad. to-day ' He said he had seen neither of the Perrins since the reported discovery, and could not affirm or deny the report, but said there was a well-authenticated tradition that considerable money had been buried there by the Sac Indians in 1832, and shortly before he purchased his farm on the Chariton River he knows personally that three Indians of the Fox tribe had visited the section and had spaded on the farm he owns for hidden money. Captain London gave the history of the buried treasure as follows:

Story of Hidden Treasure. "In 1832 the Foxes, then inhabiting North ern Missouri, received a large annulty from he Government. It amounted to some where between $12,000 and $15,000 and was in gold. Three powerful braves were selected as custodians of the money, and in their journey to and from the paying office traveled by themselves. At that time the Sacs were warring with the Foxes They learned about the annuity and seabout to capture it. The Foxes were no hunting a fight; they simply wanted to get back to their tribesmen safely with the money. Versed as they were in their knowledge of the woods and streams, they had still more clansmen to deal with, and the Sacs at last came up with them about the old fish trap on the Chariton, which even then was in existence and had been for many years previous.
"The Foxes saw they were trapped, but they died fighting for their kinsmen's "That is, tradition or history as I have gathered it in my section. The balance is from personal knowledge, and it goes to establish the story of the robbery and mur-

"Within a few years the Indians left o were driven out of Missouri. Many knives, spear or arrow heads have been picked up along Chariton, and recently a stone tom-ahawk was found near the spot where the Foxes were slaughtered.

Indians Visited the Place. "About twenty-seven years ago three In dians visited the spot where my farm now is, and searched all over the 'west forty.' They said they had learned many years Trey said they had learned many years back from a captured member of the Sac tribe, who possibly was one of the party that attacked the Fox treasure messengers, that after the robbery, the Sacs had buried the gold, and it was still there in the forest somewhere. They had come a long distance, and evidently had obtained a pretty good description of the place. They spaded around some time saveral days specific products. around some time, several days perhaps and then pretended to give the job up in disgust. But the general impression is they found some of the money at least. There is hardly a doubt but that something valuable was buried there, and that it was done by Indians, or these would scarcely have ventured so far into civiliza-

"I am going to investigate the matter ser when I get home. If the Perrins have really found a pot of gold there, I ex-pect my farm will be pretty effectually spaded up by the neighbors by the time I get back

The old fish trap referred to by Captain London is a peculiar device originally con-structed by the Indians. It is simply a rock dam built across a shallow part of the Chariton river. A beautifully picture-sque camping place borders the stream there. In the center of the dam is a box that looks like a chicken coop. The water is directed to and passes through this box. At certain stages of the river the run of cat and Buffalo in the trap is enormous,

BROKE ENGAGEMENT TO GO AND FIGHT

Soldier Could Not Resist Opportunity to Secure Active Service in the Philippines.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL Washington, Aug. 17-It now appears that leutenant Louis J. Van Schalck's desire to again engage in active warfare was really responsible for the breaking of his engagement to Miss Mabel Crounse.

The officer saw some rather severe fightng in the Philippines while serving wit the Fourth Infantry there and received wounds, the scars of which he will bear for life. One arm was nearly severed from his body by a bolo cut and for several months he was under treatment at the army hospital at the Washington Barracks. He finally recovered sufficiently to return to his home at Cobleskill, N. Y.

Then, with the first outbreak of Mores n Mindanao, he experienced again the war fever and determined to seek service in that section of the Philippines. The I wenty-seventh Infantry had been ordered to Mindanno, and, upon his personal application to the War Department, he was transferred as an officer of the Fourth Infantry to the Twenty-seventh Infantry-end rdered to the Philippines. Lieutenant Van Schaick reached the de-cision again to go to the front just prior to the day agreed upon for his wedding with Miss Crounse. He explained to the young lady that he felt it his duty to return to the scene of fighting; that he was ambitious for promotion and that, by seeking the field of greatest activity, he would me neid of greatest activity, he would probably secure a captaincy.

Meanwhile, he did not think that he would take unto himself a wife and, therefore, canceled the engagement.

This is the story as told by some of the war Department officials and army officers express themselves freely as indorsing the Lieutenant's attitude in the matter.
